This table is a guide only and actual entry requirements may be higher or lower than those indicated. In all cases admission will be determined upon the receipt of an application. The University reserves the right to vary entry requirements to those published without further notice. For further explanations of this table refer to the key on page 57 and 58.
All international applicants are required to sit an entrance test, the UNSW Foundation Studies Transition Assessment (GAT), and, if successful, submit a Music Aptitude Test (GSAT), administered by the Taiwan Department of Cultural Affairs. The test is offered in English, Chinese, and Japanese.

Entry requirements are based on the highest two subjects, with specific minimums for each exam board. Maximum marks are set by the exam board and are not capped. The best four externally examined subjects will be assessed for ICAO English requirement.

Important information regarding UAC

The University of the Sunshine Coast and International Baccalaureate (IB) Diploma Program are recognised by the Australian Schools Standards Council for entry into its undergraduate programs. Students who have completed IBDP may be eligible for some of the programs listed in the Admission Information section.

Important information regarding UAC

The Universities Admissions Centre (UAC) is the official application service for the University of the Sunshine Coast. All applications for undergraduate study must be submitted through UAC. For further information about UAC, visit their website: www.uac.edu.au

Application process

1. UAC - The Universities Admissions Centre (UAC) is the official tertiary education admissions body in Australia. It is the only body that can accept applications for entry to UNSW. To apply, you must register with UAC and select UNSW as your university of choice.

2. UNSW - After you have received an offer from UAC, you will need to accept the offer and enrol at UNSW. You will be notified by email from UAC about the offer. Once you have accepted the offer, you will need to enrol in your program at UNSW. You can enrol online through your UNSW Student Centre account.
